Ardmore, Sunday, August 29, 1915.

The use of the war air machine declares open season for men, women and children.

Carranza has cut out the sale of liquor in the portion of the republic which he controls. The Mexican chief ought to remember what happened to Russia after vodka was prohibited.

The government sees the approaching trouble with reference to the cotton market, and has arranged a large sum of money to be used in making loans. If the farmer can get along by borrowing about $25 a bale, he will be taken care of. But $25 a bale pays only the current expenses and the man who owes money at the bank or at the store, or who must have some extra supplies, cannot get along on $25 a bale. The south does not need the money of the government unless it can be had in amounts more nearly the value of the cotton. Local bankers have always cared for the cotton crop as well as it will be cared for this year. Government money may be cheap when it makes its start out of Washington, but by the time it reaches the farmer it will be the same kind of money he borrowed last year, and the interest rate will be about the same.

GET IN AND HELP

The Labor Day celebration for September 5 and 7 has become an affair of the city's, and it is incumbent upon Ardmore people to take hold and make it a success. The Trades Council has been very active during the past week, and the people generally are making contributions to the entertainment fund. A barbecue in Ardmore has not been undertaken before in several years, and the union boys are to be congratulated upon their willingness to organize for one. Every store in the city will be closed on Labor Day and almost every citizen will take advantage of the opportunity to spend the day at Whittington park as a guest of the labor unions of the city. Many visitors will be here from surrounding towns, and every effort is being made to have all Carter county citizens to take the day off and spend it as guests of Ardmore.

Every citizen of the city should contribute in some way to the success of the barbecue and picnic. The unions cannot do all the work and make all the contributions required. A few hundred well filled baskets would add materially to the entertainment of the visitors and to the reputation of the city.

The Ardmore spirit suggests that every man do something to make the affair a big success.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS IN EAST

Although there was a law enacted in Philadelphia in 1881 requiring the city board of education to establish mixed schools where whites and negroes were to be educated together, yet there is a Philadelphia spirit at this time which is resulting in a separation of the races. Separate schools are gradually taking the place of the mixed school and vocational training is being made a specialty in the negro schools. Booker T. Washington conceived the idea a number of years ago that vocational training was the ideal education for the negro race for the next century, and Philadelphia is becoming converted to the Washington idea.

The Philadelphia movement shows that the north is getting away from the mixed school idea and also that education is becoming more of applying practical ideas than it is to attempt to give every pupil a higher education or not. Every city should profit by the Philadelphia plan and establish workshops in all the schools. Education is not so much a knowledge of books as it is a knowledge of how to do something worth doing. The negro who is given a useful trade during his school years will be too busy a man to enroll his name on the criminal court records.

THE GALVESTON SPIRIT

A man with kodak in hand walked into a drug store in Galveston and asked for films. The druggist was just out. A visit to other drug stores met with the same answer, and the visitor realized the spirit of Galveston. He could not purchase films to be used in making pictures of the wreck caused by the big storm. While the storm was raging, and as long as a message could be sent to the world, Galveston declared that it was safe. The first news that came over the wires after the hurricane passed was that Galveston was safe. When the weather observer sent out couriers on bicycles to warn the people along the water front to move to higher ground, Galveston made strenuous objections. The Galveston spirit was to declare everything and everybody safe. The Galveston spirit was to encourage everybody to stay in the city and take what was coming. The Galveston spirit was to minimize the effects of the storm, so strangers would not fear to visit Galveston during the storm period.

Town spirit is well, but when town spirit would keep storm warnings away, when town spirit would cover the presence of some plague, when town spirit costs lives of people, it is criminal. Galveston carried the town spirit just a little too far.

Some professor at the Texas A. & M. college has discovered that 100 worth of peanuts has as much food value as 300 worth of meat, and now everybody in Texas is preparing to subsist on peanuts and prices for sandy land are going up every day. Oklahoma has a freak who discovered that alfalfa biscuits were very palatable and very nutritious, and Oklahomans tried for one full year to make horses of themselves and eat alfalfa. Oklahoma learned better, and so will Texas.

Make our Song Just a Little Merrier

We have in stock almost any kind of machine-made horse shoe you could desire, and we know how to put them on, but our skill consists in knowing when your horse needs a specially made shoe and we know how to make them, too, and know how to fit them to the feet.

I do most of the horse shoeing myself and have a new man to assist me, who is well equipped to do this kind of work. My old customers who are accustomed to my work, can have me do all or any part of their work, if they request it.

We have the best equipped shop, we have the highest priced labor and the best labor. We are devoted to our business. We are used to hard work and we like to have plenty of it on hand. Our song is a little merrier, life is a little happier, and we naturally do a little better work when there is lots of it on hand.

We do general blacksmithing and are eager for your order this week..

CO-OPERATIVE CREAMERY WAS DISCUSSED

SEVERAL DAIRYMEN MET AT THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE YESTERDAY FOR THE PURPOSE OF CO-OPERATION.

Yesterday afternoon, pursuant to a call issued by County Agent R. L. Scott, several dairymen of the city and county met at the chamber of commerce for the purpose of discussing the feasibility of a co-operative creamery. The meeting was well attended by representative dairymen, who were all in favor of the movement and pledged their support provided the necessary number of cattle could be secured to insure its success.

R. L. Scott was chosen as temporary chairman and F. K. West secretary. The dairymen present were unanimous in their opinion that the time had arrived when the farmers of this section must change their method of farming if they desired to make a success, the principal theme advanced was to get away from cotton and go into something that was sure of results and would bring greater returns upon the investment.

A committee consisting of F. K. West, Morris Sass and Walter Colbert was selected to investigate among the farmers and business men of this locality and see if conditions warranted the organization of a creamery at this time. This committee will report back next Saturday the result of their investigation, and if favorable, the organization will be pushed forward. About 350 milk cows were pledged yesterday, but conservative estimates made by men who have experience in this line has been, that it takes at least 500 to successfully operate a creamery.

Col. Suggs was called and stated to the dairymen that although he knew but little about the dairy business, he was willing to co-operate with them in making the creamery a success and advocated the abandonment of cotton raising and more time devoted to raising stock to consume the feed raised on the farm and thereby sell their corn and feed on the hoof as well as turning a large amount of it into butter fat through the medium of the dairy cow. L. West, Walter Colbert, Mr. Langston, and Felix King also spoke in favor of the proposition and pointed out local instances to back their contentions. Morris Sass advanced a plan that appealed to the dairymen present as a method of financing five hundred head of good dairy cattle as follows: He suggested that 25 of the best farmers of the county wait on the local banks and capitalists and ask them to carry paper necessary to finance that many cattle, let the farmers have the cows to be paid for by fifty per cent of the product of them at 8 per cent interest until paid. He said that he believed that it could be done and it would be the beginning of putting this section of the county on a cash basis.

The dairymen advanced another argument that was a surprise to many present, and that was the practice of several local confectioneries and soda fountains using ice cream manufactured in Oklahoma City, in preference to the home product. It was the sense of the meeting that these men be advised that, all things being equal, the home industry was entitled to their trade and local industries fostered instead of being discouraged. Mr. Bostick who has taken great interest in the creamery movement, advanced many good suggestions that will no doubt be adopted when the permanent organization is perfected. The committee and dairymen will meet at the chamber of commerce next Saturday to report progress, and if all is favorable, a co-operative creamery will result.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

In a printing plant two-thirds of the money received for work goes to the men who do the labor and the other one-third goes principally to the purchase of stock. Printing establishments must pay their labor bills each week, if they do not they will not remain in business very long. When persons delay payment of printing bills they are embarrassing the laborer and humiliating his family. The large per cent of the money goes to the laborer, and to those who have work in this line done, the prompt payment should be a pleasure, as the money goes direct to the laborer and his family.

PROMINENT REPUBLICAN HERE

James E. Harris Talks Politics and Trades in Oil Lands

Big Jimmie Harris, republican national committeeman, is spending a number of days in the Healdton oil fields with J. L. Hamon. It is said that an active new oil company will be the result of his visit.

Big Jimmie takes a special delight in punishing a democrat. He has gotten up a statement of elections held in Oklahoma since 1907, and he is boasting loudly that all signs point to a republican victory in 1916. He figures it out this way, that when Frantz was on the republican ticket in 1907, he received more votes than Bob Williams did on the democratic ticket, in 1914. He also claims that if the progressives had been added to the republican votes in 1914, Williams would have won over Fields only with 500 votes. He claims this nearness of republican victory, with 30,000 republican votes disfranchised by the operation of the grandfather clause. He is laughing in his sleeve of the destruction of that law and is watching the democrats closely to checkmate whatever they undertake to do to put a similar law on the statute books limiting the rights of suffrage of the negro. Big Jimmie is a candidate for re-election as national committeeman and is regarded here as being the leading candidate, however, his boasting as to republican victory in 1916, is about the same kind of political noise that the republicans have been making since statehood. The democrats of Oklahoma have a greater majority now than they had in 1907. While the Williams vote was less in 1914, that cannot be taken as a criterion. The republicans waged a relentless war on Bob Williams and he was a victim of primary campaign tactics that will not be repeated any more in Oklahoma. The republican nominee had a very wide acquaintance among the farming element and polled more than the normal strength of his party, and Williams polled less than the normal strength of his party, and there is no more likelihood of defeat in 1918 than there was in 1907, and there is no foundation for any thought that Oklahoma will do anything in a national election except to vote for the democratic presidential electors. Oklahoma is as solidly democratic as Texas, except that we must up here be careful to give the people the right kind of government.
